

Program Style Guide

This Guide is designed to help you craft session titles and program descriptions that will help your session stand out in a sea of stellar sessions.

1. Word Limits: Session titles should be no more than 10 words and session descriptions should be no more than 100-125 words. We, of course, will make exceptions to this rule if necessary.
2. Be Clear and Concise: While creativity is encouraged, clarity is paramount. Ensure your session title clearly conveys the topic or theme in a concise manner. Avoid overly complex language that might confuse or alienate potential attendees. Strive for clarity and conciseness in all descriptions, avoiding jargon or overly technical language that may be inaccessible to some readers.
3. Compelling Program Descriptions: Your program description is your “elevator pitch” to attendees. Highlight the unique value of your session and why it is important. What will participants gain? Why should they choose your session over the 16 others that may be running concurrently? Emphasize the tangible benefits and incorporate the learning objectives.
4. Style: ATALM uses the Chicago Style Guide to ensure consistency and clarity. Third-person language is used to ensure an objective perspective. Third person perspective using third-person pronouns such as "he," "she," "it," or "they," rather than first-person pronouns like "I" or "you." We also always capitalize “Indigenous” and “Native”.
5. Native Languages in the Title: Titles must clearly state what is happening in the session. If using Native languages, always include the English translation first.
6. Acronyms: Refrain from using acronyms. Spell out terms in full to ensure clarity and accessibility for all readers. It is okay to use an acronym once it has been introduced.
7. Do Not Include Presenters in the Description: Focus on the content of the presentations rather than mentioning presenters in the descriptions. This ensures that the emphasis remains on the subject matter. Presenters are recognized at the end of each program description.
8. Visual Elements: When space is available, ATALM likes to include logos or project photos in sessions. No headshots. These are helpful in calling attention to your session. Please provide an image if you wish.
9. Test the Waters: Solicit feedback from your co-presenters or colleagues to refine your messaging and ensure it hits the mark.
10. Proofread and Polish: Before finalizing your session titles and descriptions, give them a thorough proofreading to eliminate any typos or grammatical errors. A polished presentation reflects positively your professionalism and attention to detail.
